The GP in the Digital Age

The British Journal of General Practice is the leading European general primary care medical journal. The BJGP is sent out to all members of the Royal College of General Practitioners and gets to over 50,000 clinicians and researchers each month. We publish peer-reviewed academic research papers relevant to primary care and our impact factor for 2013 is 2.356, with a 5-year impact factor of 2.516, making it one of the most highly cited primary care journals in the world.

We also have a vibrant ‘Out of Hours’ section where contributors and columnists from around the world offer opinion, debate, reviews, and educational articles. This section of the journal enjoys a wide readership and is the section of the journal where we put together the academic with the expert opinion. Our contributors can be controversial but they are all passionate about their subject.

We’d like to hear your voice and your informed opinions on general practice.
